the land-based branch and the largest component of the Indian Army is the Supreme Commander of the Indian Army, and it is commanded by a four-star general. The Indian Army originated from the armies which eventually became the British Indian Army, and the armies of the princely states of the region after independence. The Indian Army has a regular and geographically divided into seven commands, with the basic force comprises more than 80% of the country's active defence personnel. The Indian Army is the largest standing army in the world, with 1,237,117 active troops and 960,000 reserve troops. The Indian Army is part of a long-term modernisation program known as Future Indian Army, which includes upgrading and acquiring new assets for its armoured, artillery and
